NSC BRIEFING

1 December 1954

CHINESE OFFSHORE ISLANDS

~~TOP SECRET~~ Note: text amended to follow order of existing — and incorporate new data

I. Chinese Communist harassment of Nationalist-held offshore islands expected to continue through winter.

- A. ~~During most of November Communists concentrated on Tachens group, possibly in effort to induce Nationalist withdrawal.~~
- B. ~~There was only minor action against Quemoy and Matsu groups.~~
- C. ~~Communists on 26 November conducted naval shelling of Wuchiu, tiny isolated island between Quemoy and Matsu.~~
- D. ~~Some possibility of Communist submarine activity in offshore island waters.~~

II. ~~Communist amphibious assaults on all three of major offshore groups will remain possible throughout winter, as weather clears for several days at time.~~

- A. Peiping still appears uncertain, however, as to US intentions as regards defense of these major groups.
- B. Moreover, assaults on Tachens and Quemoys would be costly even against Nationalist opposition alone.

III. Of major island groups, Tachens appear most vulnerable to Communist harassment short of invasion, as these islands are at end of Taipei's longest supply line (over 200 miles from ports in northern Formosa).

A. Communist air power can hamper Tachen supply by attacks on approaching vessels and one good harbor.

25X1X4
[REDACTED] Communist air-field under construction near Haimen. Nationalist commander in Tachens reportedly told he can expect little if any air support.

B. Communists could also hinder supply by artillery fire from islands to north and west.

25X1C8b

[REDACTED] several new Communist artillery sites on these islands near Tachens.

C. Sinking of Nationalist destroyer escort near Tachens on 14 November may discourage Taipei from risking further losses of major combat vessels in Tachens area. If so, Tachens and shipping in area would be more vulnerable to Communist naval fire.

D. Communists could also weaken Tachens by repeated bombing and artillery attacks on targets on islands themselves.

E. Short of supplies, and under repeated attacks, morale of Nationalist garrison in Tachens would certainly deteriorate.

(7) F. Deterioration could be hastened by Communist capture of smaller outlying islands to north and south of Tachens--Yushans and Ichiang to north, Pishan and Nanchishan to south--most of which were bombed during November.

E a. Although current Nationalist intention is to fight for Tachens if necessary, Taipei might decide to withdraw its forces from Tachens if faced with weakening Tachens garrison and loss of smaller nearby islands.

III w. This pattern of Communist harassment could be extended to Matsus and Quemoys.

A. Communists reported to be preparing artillery positions on mainland northwest of Matsus. First raid on Matsus by Communist frogman took place 20 November.

B. Quemoys have been shelled intermittently since early November.

IV. Chinese Communist action against Wuchiu island on 26 November greatly exaggerated by press.

A. Action did not involve Communist landing attempt, only shelling by several Chinese Communist gundboats for period of one hour.

A B. Incorrect version result of mistake by Nationalist commander on Wuchiu, who erroneously sent code number for landing rather than bombardment.

C. Most recent report from Wuchiu was that Nationalist flag still flying on night of 26 November. (This obviously outdated.)

B. ALL LARGE ISLAND SHILLED BY SEVERAL PATROL VESSELS 26 NOV.

C. ~~THIS SERVED SUCH SHELLING IN 1954.~~ <sup>THIRD</sup> ~~THIS DOUBTFUL.~~

D. ~~CLAIM SHELLING FOLLOWED BY LANDING ATTEMPT.~~ ~~FACT UNKNOWN~~

D. ~~Some question as to why Communists bothered with~~ ~~Wuchiu, as of no strategic importance either in~~
~~itself or as base for attacks.~~

E. ~~ISLAND WOULD MAKE ADVANCE BASE FOR COMMUNISTS.~~

E. ~~One speculation is that Communists were trying~~
~~to draw major Nationalist vessels into submarine~~
~~trap, in light of recent reports of sub sightings.~~

Q VI. ~~There are four recent indications of possible Communist~~
~~submarine activity in offshore island waters.~~ 25X1C8b1

A. [REDACTED]
~~of waters around Nanchishan Island, most south-~~
~~westly island of Tachens command indicates~~
~~possible presence of submarine of Soviet~~ ~~Medium class, in addition to three LST's and~~
~~one apparent subchaser.~~

A. Nationalist DE sunk on 14 November may have been hit by surfaced submarine rather than by torpedo boats as reported.

B. On 26 November a Chinese Nationalist destroyer escort reportedly made sonar contact ~~14~~ miles southeast of Tachens. Nationalists believe contact was submarine.

C. Nationalist officer reports sighting of submarine about two miles west of Wuchiu on 26 November, about time of Communist naval shelling.

~~MAN Y NAT REPORTED SIGHTINGS BELIEVED FALSE/DOUBTFUL~~

E. Chinese Communist navy believed to have three to six submarines, of coastal and long-range type, based at Tsingtao. These have been in training status and were not believed capable of operating as far from base as these reports suggest.

F. Confirmation of recent reports would have major significance for Nationalist navy and perhaps for US 7th Fleet units in coastal waters as well.
